Views of a Bishop Who Has Just Been Talking with the Pope.

(Ny Associated Press.)

20.-A representative of with Eishop Spaiding, of Peoria, Ill., had an interview with the Pope.

Speaking in regard to the reports again circulated that Mgr. Satolli would short-ly be recalled from the United States. op Spalding repeated that it had heard absolutely nothing, either at the Vatican or elsewhere, to give the slightto these reports.

That Mgr. Satolli will not remain per manently in the United States," continued the Bishop, " is certain, as is also his elevation to the Cardinalate ere long; but it is well known that the Pope has expressed his satisfaction with the in which Mgr. Satolli has acquitted himself of the mission intrusted to him, and I have no reason to suppose that His Holiness has any desire to recall him at short notice."

"Do you think," asked the correspond ent, "that the institution of an Apostolic delegation has been advantageous to the interests of the Catholic religion in the United States?"

"My impression is that the majority of North American Catholics have not regarded the presence of an Apostolic dele-gration favorably, and do not, moreover. believe that the interests of the Catholic Church will in any sense be advanced thereby. The situation of the Catholic Church in America, it must be considered, is in many respects without a parellel, and the Church there has exigencies which an Italian envoy, whose mind has Commissionership of East Africa. phere quite different from ours. might fail to appreciate."

Do you believe that the Pope will to intervene in the schools question at any future time?"

"His Holiness has made a definitive pronouncement in ordaining that the resolutions of the Baltimore Congress are to be acted upon, and this declaration must suffice, especially in view of the fact that the resolutions are respected by the American clergy and

"Has the Pope, to your knowledge of Washington?"

"His Holiness has had no reason to make any pronouncement on the subject, seeing that no real conflict exists between the two universities. In point of fact, there are not two universities.

There is a school under Jesuit direction, to which are annexed two faculties, one of jurisprudence, the other of medicine, and at the side of this school there is a university founded under the suspices of the American episcopacy.

"It is true that the Jesuit Schbol has many more students than the University, but, I repeat, His Holiness has never judged it necessary to pronounce."

among the dancers during the night. Keane, who was detailed at the hall to preserve peace, had his bands full.

At 3.30 o'clock the prisoners, with several friends, came tumbling down the stairs, swearing and striking out at one another. Keane sprang at them and ordered them disperse, or he would arrest every one of them.

Shanahan for a reply gave the policeman a kick in the stomach. As Keane doubled up from the kick O'Donovan struck him a blow in the mouth. At the same time Mangin caught Keane by the legs and pulled him off his feet.

Detective Sheridan appeared at this juncture. On seeing the state of affairs he blew a blast from his whistle and in a few minutes a quartet of policemen appeared.

The order "charge" was given, and in a few minutes the hall was cleared and the three prisoners were in custody. After being locked up for the balance of the night they were taken to court, where the magistrate committed them to prison, on the way downstairs to the prison, the three men turned upon Keane and threatened to assault him then and there, but other officers appeared and prevented it.
